REGIONAL SECURITY STUDIES

INTRODUCTION

The Department of National Security Affairs at the Naval Postgraduate School offers a comprehensive Masters Degree program in Regional Security Studies, tailored to the intellectual needs and institutional requirements of the U.S. armed forces and related federal agencies and departments. We provide fully accredited curricula concentrating on Europe and Eurasia, Asia, Africa, Latin America, and the Middle East, in an academic environment that includes students from all the U.S. armed services, other government departments, and many foreign countries. Students may enter our curricula in any academic quarter, and with any undergraduate background. Questions about admissions procedures should be addressed to the Naval Postgraduate School Director of Admissions, or to the National Security Affairs Curricular Officer (Appendix A).

Depending upon sponsor requirements, study at NPS may be preceded or followed by language instruction at the Defense Language Institute, co-located on the Monterey Peninsula. In addition, courses conveying Phase I JPME certification, as well as selected U.S. Marine Corps PME courses, are available to Regional Security Studies students while in residence at NPS.

Graduate-level programs in security studies evolve continuously in response to changing international conditions, the changing interests and research activities of the faculty, and changing sponsor requirements. It is certain that some of the information presented here will become outdated over time. Questions about academic planning, course requirements, thesis topics, and so on, should be directed to the Academic Associate. Questions about service-related or administrative issues should be directed to the Curriculum Officer.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

All recipients of a Master's Degree at NPS must complete a sequence of courses approved by their program sponsor, including at least 16 hours of graduate work at the 4000-level. Programs in Regional Security Studies are structured to satisfy these requirements, while affording students sufficient flexibility to develop and pursue their own interests effectively. Curricular requirements derive from the Educational Skill Requirements developed in consultation with curriculum sponsors (N3/5 for 681-84, DNI for 824), and vary somewhat depending upon service affiliation and length of stay. Students should be alert to these differences.

Disciplinary Core Courses. All students in Regional Security Studies are expected to acquire a basic familiarity with four academic fields: history, international relations, comparative politics, and economics. The courses required to satisfy this requirement are:

NS 3000, War in the Modern World

NS 3023, Introduction to Comparative Politics

NS 3024, Introduction to International Relations

NS 3040, Politics of Global Economic Relations;

or NS 3041, Comparative Economic Systems

NS 2011, Policy Analysis and Research Methods

Disciplinary core courses should be taken as early as possible in a student's program of study.

The two-hour course in research methods, NS2011, Policy Analysis and Research Methods; is required as an overload (a fifth course) during the first or second quarter of enrollment. (Beginning in Spring 2007, this will become a four-hour course to be taken as part of a student's normal four-course load.)

Curricular Core Courses. Every Regional curriculum includes courses that are required either individually or as one of a small number of specified alternatives. In the Area Studies curricula (681-84), the curricular core courses provide a basic introduction to the subspecialty region.

Curricular Electives. Curricular electives are courses directly and substantially pertinent to the subspecialty region. Curricular electives differ from curricular core courses to the extent that individual courses are not required. They differ from "general" electives, described below, to the extent that student choices are confined to a list of designated courses. The array of courses offered as curricular electives varies from year to year, and will change as new courses are developed. In nearly all cases, the appropriateness of a course as a curricular elective for a given region will be apparent from its title (i.e., the title of the course mentions the region or country on which it focuses). Questions about the appropriateness of new or unlisted courses as curricular electives should be addressed to the Academic Associate.

General Electives. A student's choice of general electives is not constrained by formal requirements – though it is assumed that the courses chosen will be consistent with the student's overall educational goals, and with the goals of subspecialty education as described in the sponsor's ESRs. General electives may be chosen to support thesis research, to pursue secondary areas of academic interest, or to prepare for the comprehensive examination. They may be chosen from all courses in National Security Affairs or, with permission of the Academic Associate, from other departments or groups at NPS.

Strategic Studies Requirement – USN Only. USN students are required to take a strategic studies course if they are in a regional studies curriculum. This requirement may be fulfilled by taking NS4990, Seminar in Strategic Studies, or one of the following strategy-related courses: NS4235, NS4236, NS4280, NS4285, NS4669, or NS4801.

“SECNAV” Requirement. The Secretary of the Navy has ordered that all DON personnel enrolled at NPS take at least four hours of graduate-level course work addressing:

the historical, current, and evolving elements of maritime strategy. Instruction in developments in naval warfare will include an analysis and comparison of present and emerging tactical and strategic naval doctrine as well as an analysis of emerging technical developments and their potential effect upon the prosecution of tactical and strategic naval warfare by the United States, our allies, and our potential adversaries.

Navy and Marine officers may satisfy this requirement by enrolling in NW 3230, Strategy and Policy: The American Experience. Marine Officers who either have attended or will attend the Command and Staff College may validate the requirement. Others may take the course at any time. Navy officers should take it during their first quarter, to insure that they are able to complete the rest of the JPME sequence, of which this course is a part.

ONI Requirement. All Naval Intelligence officers are required to take two courses in addition to their curricular requirements and electives. These courses are NS3159 (Principles of Joint Operational Intelligence) and NS4159 (Intelligence Capstone Seminar). One of these courses may be used as a substitute for one regional curricular elective.

JPME Requirement. A course sequence conveying JPME Phase I certification is required of all U.S. Navy officers in Regional Security Studies. Details about the courses necessary to satisfy this requirement can be found in the Naval Postgraduate School on-line catalogue. Regional Security Studies curricula allocate three course blocks of time (12 credit hours), in addition to the SECNAV course, to complete the sequence. JPME courses are an independent requirement, and may not be used to validate other required courses. Nor do they count as “general electives,” described below. Additional information on JPME should be obtained from Professor Fred Drake, Chairman, Joint Professional Military Education.

Army FAO Requirement. All Army FAOs are required to take at least 60% of their coursework in area-relevant classes. To ensure that they meet this requirement they should take at least one additional regional elective or language class in place of one general NSA elective. Army FAOs must also enroll in the refresher language courses that are offered by NPS if they are relevant to their designated field. If NSA does not offer a refresher class, or if the student wishes to advance his or her language skills, students are encouraged to enroll in language classes at the Monterey Institute for International Studies (MIIS), with which NPS has a free cross-registration program. Instruction in languages not offered at MIIS can be arranged at California State University-Monterey Bay or Monterey Peninsula College, on a per class basis, at additional cost. If the language is not offered at any of these institutions, it is possible to arrange on-on-one study through MIIS, for additional cost. Students will work with their Academic Associate to determine how these language classes will fit into their program of study at NPS.

Thesis Research. Students who enroll in programs of study lasting longer than 12-months are required to write a thesis. To do so, they are afforded the opportunity to enroll in NS0810, Thesis Research, a maximum of three times. Thesis students also must take NS4080, Research Colloquium, normally during their third or fourth quarter in residence.<sup>1</sup> Students who satisfy curricular course requirements through validation of courses (see p. 4, below) or by other means (e.g. taking an overload in a previous quarter), may enroll in NS 0810 more frequently with the permission of the Academic Associate. Those who prefer to take additional courses while completing their theses may enroll less frequently.

Students in 12-month programs may elect to write a thesis in lieu of taking the Comprehensive Examination (described below). Such a choice entails using some or all General Electives to enroll in NS 0810, Thesis Research. In these cases, NS4080, Research Colloquium, substitutes for NS0811, Comprehensive Examination.

All students writing theses should familiarize themselves with departmental policies regarding thesis proposals, and the time-table for the submission of the final manuscript. This information is available from the Department office.

Comprehensive Examination. Students whose language training requirements allow them only 12 months of graduate study may substitute such training for a Master's Thesis, for the purpose of satisfying NPS degree requirements. Students who elect to make this substitution must also complete a written Comprehensive Examination in their sub-specialty field. Students taking comprehensive examinations are afforded time to prepare via enrollment in NS0811, Comprehensive Examination. Note, however, that this course is not required. Student may use the time to take an additional elective if they wish. Details about the structure and contents of Comprehensive Examinations are available from the NSA office, or from the Academic Associate.

CURRICULUM PLANNING

Regional Security Studies is a dynamic field. New courses are developed every year, while offerings among established courses vary from one year to the next depending upon the research programs and other commitments of the faculty. The need to provide a diverse mix of offerings means that few courses (apart from the disciplinary core courses) are offered more than once per year. These considerations, plus the fact that students enter and leave the program every quarter, and stay for varying lengths of time, make it infeasible to develop common matrices applicable to all students in a given subspecialty. The subspecialty requirements described below thus make no assumptions about course sequencing, and allow significant flexibility in course selection. Some courses require prerequisites, however, and students should be alert to these in making their plans. Requests for exceptions to prerequisite requirements should be addressed to the professor teaching the course.

Directed Studies. NS 3079, Directed Studies in National Security Affairs, and NS 4079, Advanced Directed Studies in National Security Affairs, are available to Regional Security Studies students who wish to pursue subjects that are not covered by regular departmental course offerings. Requests to enroll in these courses require explicit justification in light of the student's overall course of study. Students should keep in mind that none of the faculty in National Security Affairs teach every quarter, so it may not always be possible to arrange directed study with a particular professor at a particular time.

Validation of Courses. Students are encouraged to validate courses that duplicate material studied elsewhere. Doing so may create additional degrees of freedom, in the form of reduced course loads or an increased number of general electives, and can sometimes shorten the time necessary to obtain a degree. Students who validate a significant number of courses should be aware, however, that doing so may limit their educational opportunities, by reducing the number of relevant courses available to them in a given quarter.

Exemptions and Exceptions. The goal of the Regional Security Studies Program is to optimize educational results for individual students, while maximizing the value we convey to our curricular sponsors. To achieve this, it is occasionally necessary or desirable to waive formal requirements in order to permit students to pursue their own work most effectively. All such requests should be addressed to the Regional Coordinator and Academic Associate well in advance of any pertinent deadlines.

Advising. The system of advising in the NSA department includes the Education Technician (EdTech), Academic Associate (AA), and a set of Regional Coordinators. The Ed-Tech assists students with the procedural and technical side of course selection and administration (paperwork, official forms, selecting classes in the scheduling system, leave and extension forms, etc). When students arrive, they meet with the NSA EdTech, who provides an orientation that reviews the NSA and NPS requirements, explains the scheduling system, and provides students with their initial plan of study.

For curriculum specific, substantive matters, Regional Coordinators constitute the first line of advising for students. They provide advice on designing a course of study that meets both student needs and NSA program requirements; advice on thesis topics and selection of thesis advisors, and general program counseling. There are seven Regional Coordinators, one for each of the sub-fields in the regional studies program: Middle East, South Asia, Africa, Europe, Russia/Eurasia, East Asia and Western Hemisphere.

The Academic Associate is the approval authority for all student schedules; course selections, course substitutions and validations, and thesis proposals. All variations from the standard course curriculum will be reviewed and approved by the AA, in conjunction with the Regional Coordinator.

MIDDLE EAST, SOUTH ASIA, AND SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA (681 / XX21P)

Requirements in the 681 curriculum vary depending upon whether a student concentrates on the Middle East or Sub-Saharan Africa. Students concentrating on South Asia should consult the Academic Associate for assistance in devising an appropriate course of study.

EDUCATIONAL SKILL REQUIREMENTS

Regional Security Studies

Curricula 681, 682, 683, 684

The goal of these curricula is to educate military officers and civilian officials of the United States and other nations in regional studies and the unique challenges involved in effective security cooperation with states in other world regions. The curricula include a core of military and diplomatic history, comparative politics and international relations, policy analysis, and the U.S. decision-making process. Each curriculum includes a specific series of courses focused on region specific history and culture, politics and government, security structures and processes, security issues, and relationships with the United States and other countries and international organizations. These curricula draw upon other NPS curricula including Regional Intelligence, Strategic Studies, and Civil-Military Relations.

Students conduct research (including classified research) on questions of interest to the program sponsors, the U.S. Armed Services, the unified commands, and other federal agencies. Special emphasis is placed on the writing of a thesis, which gives the student the opportunity to develop the skills required for critical thought and coherent expression while producing a study of value to the Department of Defense. Graduates will understand regional challenges to U.S. national security and the role of U.S. national security policy in addressing such challenges. They will thoroughly understand the security situation of the particular region in which they specialize, as well as U.S. foreign and defense policies applicable to that region.

The Regional Security Studies curricula also incorporates NPS and Naval War College courses to earn Professional Joint Education (JPME) Phase I credit.

Navy Officers completing these curricula, in addition to receiving the applicable sub-specialty code for their region of study, will also receive the Additional Qualification Designator (AQD) designating them as Navy Foreign Area Officers (FAO) in accordance with applicable instructions.
